4th Annual Workshop on Sustainable Animal Advocacy: Promoting animal protection legislation in China

A three-day programme bringing animal protection groups and drafters of legislation together to promote effective animal protection legislation
September 4-6, 2009

Summary:

With efforts being made in China by legal academics to draft the country's first animal welfare legislation, ACTAsia felt it was important to help animal groups to get involved in the legislative process, and our 4th Annual Workshop focused on this issue. It was held in Beijing from September 4-6, 2009. It again targeted potential leaders of the animal protection movement in China.

On Day 1 we held a forum where animal protection groups were brought together with law drafters, concerned influential academics and government officials, to discuss how legislation needs to be drafted to address animal welfare issues, which were presented at the forum, and to start building relationships. On day 2 and day 3, selected participants from different animal groups attended an interactive workshop focusing on lobbying, research, outreach and media relationships, to help them to influence the current plans for animal protection legislation, and also help with their other work.

The forum was organised by ACTAsia for Animals (AA), Capital Animal Welfare Association and the Alliance for Animals in China (AAC), and the workshop was organised by AA and AAC. This programme was sponsored by Care for the Wild International, Humane Society International, Animals Asia Foundation, and One Voice for Animals.

Aims:

1. To promote the creation of informed and effective animal welfare legislation in China
 - a. To provide participants with an understanding of the current situation on animal protection issues in China
 - b. To promote the inclusion of clauses in the draft legislation that promote good animal welfare
2. To improve the effectiveness and involvement of Chinese animal protection groups in promoting the creation and implementation of animal welfare legislation
 - a. To train participants to use selected tools to help them create public and media outreach and lobbying campaigns to influence the current plans for animal protection legislation
 - b. To help animal groups to begin relationships with drafters and academics
3. To continue the development of animal protection groups
 - a. To review participant development following our last annual workshop and to learn from each other's experiences
 - b. To identify individuals with the potential to develop long term animal protection campaigns and to provide them with more intensive advice and assistance through field visits

Participants:

Over 100 participants were present at the Day 1 forum. Attendees included academics from leading universities and institutes, including the University of Beijing, University of Qinhu, Chinese Agriculture University, China University of Political Science and Law, Sun Yat-Sen University and Zhongnan University of Economics and Law. People's Representatives from Beijing Municipality and officials from the legislative office of the CPPCC (Chinese People's Political Consultative Committee) also attended the forum. Over 30 animal groups working in the front line of animal protection in different provinces also attended.

51 applications were received from animal protectionists from different regions of China to participate in the 2-day workshop that followed. (Appendix 1 gives participant names and contact details.)

Potential participants were questioned regarding their experience on the subjects covered in the workshop, and their needs in these areas.

There were 7 male and 17 female participants at the workshop. They represented 22 groups, of which 21 were companion animal groups, while 1 also worked on other issues.

Workshop sessions:

Day 1 forum: The forum discussed the importance of ethics in relation to animal welfare, and the implications of China's history, culture and social and economic environment on animal protection legislation. Chinese experts presented the current situation of animals in China in different industries, including farming, vivisection, captive wildlife and companion animals. Experts from Canada, Hong Kong and Taiwan covered the creation of legislation and enforcement issues, and how they were dealt with in their regions. This helped the attendees to understand what issues could arise as legislation is passed and implemented. Participants also discussed the elements needed in Chinese legislation, and what would help to convince the government to pass laws to protect animals. The resolutions passed at the forum, the presentations (most only in Chinese) and the forum proceedings are all available at the following link:

<http://www.actasia.org/index/index.php?page=legislation-forum-2009>

Please see appendix 2 for the agenda.

Each animal group participant was asked to produce a poster to describe why they think it is important to have an animal protection law in China. See appendix 5 for the posters. The posters were intended to show the drafters of legislation, academics and others the views of grassroots groups on legislation.

Day 2 and day 3 interactive workshop for selected animal groups:

We focused on providing them with the skills needed to get involved in legislation in different ways. These skills are also essential for their current work. The following subjects were covered:

1. Importance and methods of research – to show participants why it is so important to do thorough research on an issue if they want to influence stakeholders. Also, to show them the different ways in which they can obtain the information they need. This section included a field visit to Beijing Zoo, which was used in an exercise on field research. As most of the groups focus on companion animals, this was also an opportunity to increase their awareness of other animal welfare issues
2. The role of animal protection groups in the legislative process – to help participants to understand why and how they should get involved in the creation and implementation of animal protection legislation
3. Media relationships – to show them how to create materials suitable for the media, build connections, and recognise and use opportunities for media exposure effectively
4. Lobbying – to introduce participants to the basics of lobbying, and discuss how they can use these elements within the Chinese context.
5. Learning from others – an informal after-dinner session to help participants to learn from each other's work, including actions taken and mistakes made. This was also a forum for them to share the positive ways in which a work-life balance can be achieved, and to discuss personal issues that participants face because of their animal work
6. Public outreach – to help them to become more effective with their current outreach programmes and expand it to include awareness of legislation where possible
7. Discussion of steps that participants could start taking to get involved in the legislative process.

Please see appendix 3 for the agenda for the day 2 and day 3 workshop.

Workshop features:

- Chinese animal protection groups, law drafters and concerned influential academics from different parts of China came together for the first time at a forum to promote animal welfare legislation.
- Resolutions were passed at the day 1 forum regarding the need for effective animal protection legislation in China.
- Forum proceedings were provided to all forum participants
- The application forms were used to assess potential participants and gain a better understanding of the issues that they face. (For a sample application form see appendix 4.) The results were taken into consideration when designing course content.
- The participants were provided with background reading material on the issues to be discussed in the workshop. This was sent to them before the workshop.
- Tools and other handouts were provided with almost every session to facilitate learning.
- We kept the session on the importance of living a balanced life informal and positive in order to encourage sharing and mutual encouragement. The feedback we had this year from participants was much more positive and inspiring than the last two years although most of them still face many challenges while promoting animal welfare.

- In one of the sessions on the last day of the workshop participants were asked to create (and perform, where appropriate) an advertisement or some other public outreach activity for a specific target audience based on what they had learnt at the workshop. The activity with its discussion helped to clarify theoretical concepts and see how they could be used in their work.
- We were fortunate to have Rob Laidlaw, an extremely experienced campaigner and wildlife expert from ZooCheck Canada, to design and deliver the sessions on research and lobbying. He was also a presenter at the forum on day 1.
- We also appreciated the presence of Cao Bao Yin, senior editor at Beijing News and actively involved in various social justice issues, who did the session on media relationships on day 2.
- We were also fortunate to have Isabel Vadivu Govind, experienced in capacity building of animal protection groups in Asia, designing our public outreach section.
- Professor Jason Yeh, from the Veterinary Faculty, University of Taiwan, who drafted the 1st animal protection law for the Taiwanese government, kindly spoke on day 1 about Taiwan's experience of establishing legislation. Participants were very enthusiastic about learning from Taiwan's experience.
- Participants were asked to each design and bring two posters, one that described their work, and one that stated why they felt that animal protection legislation was important.

Workshop evaluation - Participants:

Participants from the selected animal groups were given evaluation questionnaires to complete and hand in at the end of the workshop.

Overall feedback:

1. They all found the pre-workshop materials effective, helping them to prepare for the workshop.
2. They felt that it was valuable to participate in the legislation forum on day 1. One participant said, "I saw many scholars and experts participating in this forum which gives us more confidence that legislation will be passed." They also felt that the chance to participate at a forum like this and interact with experts helped them to understand the different aspects of the legislative process and how to promote it. Some did think, however, that the more legal aspects of work should be left to experts, as they could not do much about it, and one participant felt that there should have been more work on China's experiences.
3. Around half felt that the time allocated to complete activities and understand content was enough, but the other half felt that there wasn't enough time to digest everything they had learnt.
4. They were satisfied with the amount of information that was provided at the workshop. One participant said, "The amount of information is within my understanding and acceptance. But 3 days a year for us is far from enough. We are thirsty for more information and resources." Another felt that the standard was quite high and forced them to become more professional. A couple of new participants felt that it would be useful to learn more about the content from earlier workshops.
5. Although most felt that there was enough time to interact with other participants, a few felt that the schedule was too tight. According to one participant, "Various forms of communication increased the opportunity of getting to know and understand each other e.g. during dinner, coffee breaks, analysing, discussing, working in different groups, etc." They are also all likely to continue to share resources and experiences with other participants after the workshop.
6. What they would like to see covered in future workshops:
 - a. More experts with different backgrounds
 - b. More sharing of skills and success stories
 - c. More animal protection information
 - d. Team building and team goal-setting
 - e. How to communicate with government and media
 - f. Companion animal medical treatment
 - g. Shelter management
 - h. Volunteer management
 - i. Managing groups and human resources
 - j. Field research
 - k. Marketing
 - l. A more in-depth guide about public outreach
 - m. Self-care
 - n. Systematic review of each group's development, to be a reference for others

Session feedback: (Note – they were asked to evaluate the session by choosing one of the following: Poor, Fair, Good, Very Good, Excellent.)

Session 1 – Field trip: Responses from fair to excellent. (Note: This was the first time that we incorporated a field trip into our workshop.) Feedback showed that they had become more aware of the situation for animals in zoos, and more sympathetic to this issue. They would have liked more time and guidance beforehand, and smaller groups. Comments included:

- Under the teacher's instruction, we saw the same thing from a different angle, and the conclusions were different. We saw a "different zoo" and were saddened at heart, but it's illuminating for our future work.
- We learnt how to observe in a scientific way.
- It was useful to see the existing problems in person, and learn how to identify issues.
- This is the first time I observed a zoo from the animals' perspective, which gave me very different feelings.
- It widened our field of vision, to observe other animals' living conditions critically

Session 2 - Media relationships: Responses from good to excellent. The participants felt that it helped to build their confidence in dealing with the media, and showed them how to use the media as a tool. They felt that the presentation was very meaningful and practical. They would have liked more interaction, and in future, would like to do case studies on the issue.

Session 3 – Effective lobbying: Responses from good to excellent. They felt that the presentation content was very detailed and professional, and it was really helpful to analyse real cases. They think it would be good to have someone with opposing views to participate in future as part of an exercise.

Session 4 – The importance of research: Responses from very good to excellent. They found the case study and the group discussion very useful. They would like more cases from China. Among the things they found useful:

- If you want to be successful, you must know yourself and your rivals.
- Collecting data in person can build your credibility and confidence.
- I gained knowledge about how to do an efficient investigation.

Session 5 – Public outreach: Responses from good to excellent. They found the group exercises and case analyses very useful, as well as learning about goals and tasks, and discussing and planning their performances for the exercise.

Evaluation of workshop and participants from animal groups - ACTAsia:

- The forum attracted a lot of interest from different stakeholders, and the animal groups definitely gained a better understanding of how the legislative process works, increased their awareness of conditions for other animals in China besides companion animals, and saw how animal groups from other countries have played a huge role in creating and implementing legislation.
- The usual language barriers were reduced at our workshop as we had a full-time translator for each non-Chinese speaking facilitator, allowing more participation in the discussions. One of our sessions was facilitated by Cao Bao Yin, and of course as there was no need for translation the participants were more involved. We plan to increase the number of sessions delivered by Chinese speakers where possible.
- Participants were very articulate and involved in the workshop
- Most of them are involved in some form of outreach, and appear to have prioritised developing their organisations and projects beyond animal rescue. Their participation and feedback both emphasise that public and media outreach have become important to them.
- It is sometimes difficult for a participant to sell the idea of change to other key members of their organisation. We are therefore thinking about having two members of each group present at the next workshop.
- The field trip was a new addition, and it had quite strong feedback – although some participants did not think that they should have spent time on an issue outside their normal work, most felt that they had seen zoos in a different light. It also made a big difference in the corresponding observation exercise, with participants having something concrete and immediate to draw from. We would like to continue this type of session if possible re: different animal abuse industries.
- The participants were not given much time alone to absorb what they had learnt, and as this was a combined forum and workshop, they had to take in quite a lot. If this is done in future we would separate the two as it overloaded the organisers and the participants.
- We did not do field visits this year as funds were insufficient. However, we did observe groups at the workshop and felt that further organisational development is needed to enable most of them to do long term campaigning. We also discussed this with ShenzhenCats, Lucky Cats, Guangzhou Family of Pets and Home of Love and encouraged them to consider selecting one specific animal issue to campaign on.

Many of the 25 participants were new to our workshop, for a variety of reasons, and this made it harder to build on past sessions. We plan to cover the most needed subjects from our past workshops at our next workshop, modified according to what we have learnt over the last few years. The workshops are a good starting point, but we need to continue to provide resources and help to the groups as everything they learn needs to be reinforced and deepened.

Next steps:

- 1) We have set up a working group consisting of Chinese academics and media representatives, and we are also working with international experts to provide comments on the draft legislation. We will also continue to bring Chinese animal protection groups into the process.

- 2) We will continue to provide broad support to workshop participants through our Chinese colleagues and the AAC network. We have also offered to provide them with individual mentoring through skype.
- 3) We asked participants to pay a nominal registration fee to help to ensure that keen participants would attend. We had announced, before the workshop, that these funds would all be used to support participants' work, and we will be using the money to print three leaflets – two on neutering, and one on animal sentience – and distribute them to participants who are interested in using them. 10,000 copies of each leaflet have been printed and distributed to the groups who submitted a request for leaflets for their own outreach programmes.

我们观察到的一些：日常中我们经常遇到残害，虐待，遗弃动物的事件，由于没有法律依据，救助和帮助它们显得力不从心。从道义的角度去谴责，我们和那些无助的动物们一样无助。立法吧，尽快出台立法，让所有生命都得到它应有的尊严。

“呼唤法律的春天”

红石福4年来的救助生涯，无比感谢社会各界的千到万遍精神鼓励、支持鼓励事件，这是对外宣传的突破口，更是我们救助的源泉和动力。动物西调查，地区性事件救助，这些对我们来说，无动，没有法律的支持让我们的很多行动无所适从，甚至平有对于他人的救助无法提供有力的反证证据，更不用说追责，制止他人的残忍行为。我们期盼动物保护法能够早日建立。

- 动物立法会提供人们正确的价值导向，在确保健康养殖的同时，先保护动物被食用。
- 动物立法会帮助志愿者有更简单的救助行动有法律依据更加便利。
- 动物立法也有助于提高民众保护动物的意识，通过动物法的立法、普法，我们可以进入校园、社区以及农村，进行更有利的宣传。
- 动物立法可以使动物保护组织获得更多的理解和信任。
- 动物立法有利于开展民间动物救助以及救援更加规范化、合法化。
- 动物立法是关爱生命的体现，有助于引导人心向善。

中国为什么需要立法保护动物

我们认为：为了人类心灵免遭痛苦和不安，获得平静和幸福。

人类与自然界其他物种的区别在于：人类在物质需求之外，有着超越时空和地域的无边和广阔的精神需求和感受能力。人类会为几千年前的一段诗句而感动，会被星空和落日所感动，又如何能对动物感伤的眼神和痛苦的哀号无动于衷呢？

人与历史、自然、宇宙、动物，在物质形态上是相互独立的，但在精神世界却是血脉相通。残酷对待动物，就是一个人对另外一部分人的精神和情感的无情的践踏和伤害。立法保护动物，就是保护人类心灵免遭痛苦和不安，获得平静和幸福。

2009年3月8日下午两点，这只蓝眼黑巧小猫被救

救的工大学生救女男生从第4楼楼窗内摔下。一刚男生发了疯一样，想跳楼，想自杀！想自杀的网住被踩死，被从窗户的窗框下，想被一志志者救助，却已终身残废，但是谁的心能对人类

无情及暴和残忍，没有对人的任何怜悯……
